For obligations for which the time period of performance is not defined or is defined as the time of demand, the running of the limitation of actions starts from the time when the right arises for the creditor to make a demand for performance of the obligation, and, if the debtor is given a grace time period for the performance of such a demand, then the calculation of the limitation of actions starts at the end of this time period.
3. On subrogation obligations, the running of limitation of actions starts from the time of performance of the principal obligation.

Article 338. Time Period of Limitation of Actions on Change of Persons in an Obligation

The change of persons in an obligation does not entail a change in the time period of limitation of actions nor the procedure for calculating it.

Article 339. Suspension of the Running of the Time Period of Limitation of Actions

1. The running of the time period of limitation of actions shall be suspended:

The time during which the limitation was suspended shall not be calculated in the time period of limitation of actions. In such a case if the remaining part of the time period is less than six months, it shall be extended to six months.

Article 342. Reinstatement of a Time Period of Limitation of Actions

In exceptional cases, when a court recognizes a compelling reason for letting a time period of limitations of actions pass due to circumstances connected with the person of the plaintiff (serious illness, helpless condition, illiteracy, etc.), a violated right of a citizen shall be subject to protection. The reasons for letting a period of time of limitation of actions pass may be recognized as compelling if they took place in the last six months of the time period of limitations or, if the time period is equal to six months or less than six months, during the time period of limitations.

Article 343. Performance of an Obligation After Expiration of the Time Period of Limitation of Actions

A debtor or other obligated person who has performed an obligation after the expiration of the time period of limitation of actions shall not have the right to demand the performance back, even if at the time of performance this person did not know of the expiration of the limitation.

DIVISION 6. GENERAL PROVISIONS ON OBLIGATIONS

Chapter 22. Definition of and Parties to an Obligation

Article 345. Definition of an Obligation and Bases for Its Origin

1. By virtue of an obligation one person (the debtor) undertakes the duty to take for the benefit of another person (the creditor) a defined action, such as: to pay money, to transfer property, to do work, render services, etc., or refrain from a defined action, and the creditor has the right to demand from the debtor the performance of its obligation.
2. Obligations arise from contract, from the causing of harm, and from other bases indicated in the present Code.

Article 346. Parties to an Obligation

1. One or simultaneously several persons may participate in an obligation as either of the parties—creditor or debtor.
The invalidity of claims of a creditor against one of the persons participating in an obligation on the side of the debtor and likewise the expiration of the time period of limitation of actions with respect to such a person, in and of itself does not affect its claims against the remaining persons.
2. If each of the parties to a contract bears an obligation for the benefit of the other party, it is considered a debtor of the other party as to what it has the duty to do for its benefit and simultaneously its creditor for what it has the right to demand from it.
3. An obligation does not create duties for persons who are not participants in it as parties (for third persons).
In cases provided by a statute, other legal acts, or by agreement of the parties, an obligation may create rights for third persons with respect to one or both of the parties to an obligation.

Chapter 23. Performance of Obligations

Article 351. Performance of an Obligation by a Third Person

1. Performance of an obligation may be placed by the debtor on a third person, unless a duty of the debtor to perform the obligation personally follows from a statute, other legal acts, the terms of the obligation, or its nature. 2.In cases when an obligation does not provide a time period for its performance and does not contain terms making possible the determination of this time period, it must be performed in a reasonable time period after the origin of the obligation.

A debtor must perform an obligation not performed in a reasonable time period and also an obligation the time period for performance of which is determined as the time of demand within a seven-day time period from the day of making by the creditor of a demand for its performance unless an obligation for performance within another time period follows from a statute, other legal acts, the terms of the obligation, the customs of trade or the nature of the obligation.

Article 353. Early Performance of an Obligation

A debtor has the right to perform an obligation early unless otherwise provided by a statute, other legal acts or the terms of the obligation or follows from its nature. 3. Unless otherwise provided by a statute or contract, a person who has not performed an obligation or has performed an obligation in an improper manner in the conduct of entrepreneurial activity shall bear liability unless it proves that proper performance became impossible as the result of force majeure, i.e., extraordinary circumstances unavoidable in the given circumstances. Such circumstances do not include, in particular, violation of obligations by contract partners of the debtor, absence in the market of goods necessary for performance, nor the debtor's lack of the necessary monetary assets.

4. An agreement concluded in advance for eliminating or limiting liability for the intentional violation of an obligation is void.

Article 418. Liability of a Debtor for the Actions of its Employees

1. If nonperformance or improper performance of an obligation occurred by fault of both parties, the court shall accordingly reduce the amount of liability of the debtor. The court also shall have the right to reduce the amount of liability of the debtor if the creditor intentionally or by negligence facilitated an increase in the amount of losses caused by the nonperformance or improper performance, or did not take reasonable measures to reduce it.

2. The rules of Paragraph 1 of the present Article shall be applied accordingly also in cases when the debtor by force of a statute or contract bears liability for nonperformance or improper performance of an obligation regardless of its fault.

Article 421. Delay by the Debtor

1. A debtor who has delayed performance shall be liable to the creditor for the losses caused by the delay and for the consequences of an impossibility of performance that accidentally occurred during the delay.

2. If, as the result of delay by the debtor, performance is no longer of interest for the creditor, the creditor may refuse to accept performance and demand compensation for losses.

3. A debtor is not considered to have delayed so long as an obligation cannot be performed as the result of delay by the creditor.

Article 422. Delay by the Creditor

A creditor shall be considered to have delayed if it has refused to accept proper performance offered by the debtor or has not taken actions provided by a statute, other legal acts, or contract or deriving from the customs of trade or from the nature of the obligation until the making of which the debtor cannot perform its obligation. A creditor also shall be considered to have delayed in the cases indicated in Paragraph 2 of Article 424 of the present Code.

2. Delay by a creditor shall give the debtor the right to compensation for the losses caused by the delay, unless the creditor proves that the delay occurred due to circumstances for which neither it itself nor the persons upon whom by force of a statute, other legal acts, or delegation of the creditor the acceptance of performance was placed, is liable.

 2. A creditor accepting performance is obligated upon demand of the debtor to issue it a receipt for having acquired performance in full or in the respective part.
- If the debtor has issued a creditor a document of indebtedness in confirmation of an obligation, then a creditor accepting performance must return this document and, if it is impossible to return it, must so indicate in a receipt issued by it. The receipt may be replaced by a notation on the returned document of indebtedness.
- The fact that the debtor has the document of indebtedness confirms, until proven otherwise, the termination of the obligation.
- In case of refusal of the creditor to give a receipt, to return the document of indebtedness or to note in the receipt the impossibility of its return, the debtor has the right to suspend performance. In such cases the creditor is considered to have delayed.

Article 425. Cancellation Compensation

By agreement of the parties an obligation may be terminated by the presentation, instead of performance, of cancellation compensation (payment of money, transfer of property, etc.). The amount of the cancellation compensation, and also the time periods and procedure for making it shall be established by the parties.

Setoff of claims is not allowed:

- 1) if, on declaration of one party, the time period of limitation of actions is applicable to a claim and this time period has expired;
- 2) for compensation for harm caused to life or health;
- 3) for recovery of support.

Setoff of claims is not allowed also in other cases provided by a statute or contract.

Article 428. Setoff in Case of Assignment of a Claim

1. In case of assignment of a claim, the debtor has the right to setoff against the claim of the new creditor its counterclaim against the initial creditor.

3. A substitution terminates supplementary obligations connected with the initial obligation, unless otherwise provided by agreement of the parties.

Article 431. Forgiving Debt debt), unless this violates the rights of other persons with respect to the property of the creditor.

Article 432. Termination of an Obligation by Impossibility of Performance

1. An obligation is terminated by impossibility of performance if the impossibility was caused by a circumstance for which none of the parties is liable. In this case the creditor does not have the right to demand performance of the obligation from the debtor.

2. In case of impossibility of performance by a debtor of an obligation caused by actions for which the creditor was at fault, the latter does not have the right to demand return of what was performed under the obligation.

2. In case the act of the state body or of the body of local self-government on the basis of which the obligation was terminated is declared invalid by the established procedure, the obligation shall be reinstated unless otherwise follows from the agreement of the parties or the nature of the obligation and the performance has not lost interest for the creditor.

Article 434. Termination of an Obligation by the Death of a Citizen

1. An obligation shall be terminated by the death of the debtor, if performance may not be made without the personal participation of the debtor or the obligation in another manner is inseparably connected with the personality of the debtor.

Article 437. Freedom of Contract

1. Citizens and legal persons are free in the conclusion of a contract.

Compulsion to conclusion of a contract is not allowed with the exception of cases when the obligation to conclude a contract is provided by the present Code, a statute, or a voluntarily accepted obligation.

2. The parties may conclude a contract provided for or not provided for by a statute or other legal acts.

3. The parties may conclude a contract that contains elements of various contracts provided for by a statute or other legal acts (a mixed contract). The rules on contracts whose elements are contained in the mixed contract shall be applied to the relations of parties under the mixed contract unless otherwise follows from an agreement of the parties or the nature of the mixed contract.

4. The terms of the contract shall be determined at the discretion of the parties except for cases when the content of the respective term is prescribed by a statute or other legal acts (Article 438).

In cases when a term of a contract is provided by a norm that is applied unless an agreement of the parties has established otherwise (a dispositive norm), the parties may by their agreement exclude its application or establish a term different from that provided in it. In the absence of such an agreement the term of the contract shall be determined by the dispositive norm.

5.If a term of a contract is not determined by the parties or a dispositive norm, the respective terms shall be determined by the customs of trade applicable to the relations of the parties.

Article 438. Contract and Statute

1.A contract must comply with rules obligatory for the parties established by a statute and other legal acts (imperative norms) in effect at the time of its conclusion.

2.If after the conclusion of a contract a statute is adopted establishing rules obligatory for the parties other than those that were in effect upon conclusion of the contract, the terms of the concluded contract shall remain in force except in cases when it was established in the statute that its effect extends to relations arising from previously concluded contracts.

Article 439. Compensated and Uncompensated Contracts

1.A contract under which a party must receive payment or other counterperformance in return for the performance of its duties is a compensated contract.

2.A contract is uncompensated under which one party undertakes the duty to provide something to the other party without receiving payment or anything else in return.

2.Change of price after conclusion of a contract is allowed in cases and on conditions provided by contract or statute.

3.In cases when in a compensated contract a price is not provided and may not be determined proceeding from the terms of the contract, performance of the contract must be paid for at the price that, under comparable conditions, usually is taken for analogous goods, work, or services.

Article 441. Effect of the Contract

1.A contract shall enter into effect and become obligatory for the parties from the time of its conclusion.

2.The parties have the right to establish that the terms of a contract concluded by them shall be applied to their relations that arose before the conclusion of the contract.

3.A statute or contract may provide that the ending of the time period of effectiveness of the contract shall entail the termination of the obligations of the parties under the contract.

A contract in which such a period of time is absent shall be recognized as in effect until the time defined in it of the termination of performance of the obligation.

4.Ending of the time period of effectiveness of a contract shall not free the parties from liability for a violation of it that occurred before the expiration of this time period.

Article 442. Public Contract

1.A public contract is a contract concluded by a commercial organization and establishing its obligations for the sale of goods, doing work, or rendering of services that this organization by the nature of its activity must make with respect to everyone who applies to it (retail trade, carriage by transport for common use, communications services, energy supply, medicine, hotel service, etc.).

Article 444. Contract of Adhesion

1. A contract of adhesion is a contract whose terms are determined by one of the parties in printed forms or other standard forms and that may be accepted by the other party not otherwise than by adhering to the proposed contract as a whole.
2. The party adhering to the contract has the right to demand the rescission or change of the contract if the contract of adhesion, although does not contradict a statute or other legal acts, deprives this party of rights usually given under contracts of such type, excludes or limits the liability of the other party for the violation of obligations or contains other terms clearly burdensome for the adhering party, that it, on the basis of its reasonably understood interests, would not have accepted if it had the possibility of participating in the determination of the terms of the contract.
3. In the presence of the circumstances provided by Paragraph 2 of the present Article a demand for the rescission or change of the contract made by the party that adhered to the contract in connection with the conduct of its entrepreneurial activity is not subject to satisfaction if the adhering party knew or should have known on what terms it was concluding the contract.

Article 445. Preliminary Contract

1. Under a preliminary contract, the parties undertake the duty to conclude in the future a contract on the transfer of property, doing work, or the rendering of services (the basic contract) on the terms provided by the preliminary contract.
2. A preliminary contract shall be concluded in the form established for the basic contract and if the form of the basic contract is not established, then in written form. Nonobservance of the rules on the form of a preliminary contract shall entail its voidness.
3. A preliminary contract must contain terms making possible the establishment of a subject and also other substantial terms of the basic contract.
4. In the preliminary contract the time period shall be indicated in which the parties are obligated to conclude the basic contract.
If such a time period is not defined in the preliminary contract, the basic contract is subject to conclusion within one year from the time of conclusion of the preliminary contract.
5. In cases when a party that has concluded a preliminary contract avoids concluding the basic contract, the rules provided by Article 461 of the present Code shall be applied.
6. The obligations provided by the preliminary contract shall be terminated if by the end of the time period in which the parties must conclude the basic contract it is not concluded or one of the parties does not send the other party a proposal to conclude this contract.
7. An agreement on intentions (letter of intent, etc.) does not create civil law consequences unless in it there is directly indicated the will of the parties to give it the effect of a preliminary contract.

Article 446. Contract for the Benefit of a Third Person

1. A contract for the benefit of a third person is a contract in which the parties have established that the debtor undertakes the duty to make performance not to the creditor but to a third person indicated or not indicated in the contract, having the right to demand performance of the obligation in its benefit from the debtor.
2. Unless otherwise provided by a statute, other legal acts, or contract, from the time of expression by the third person to the debtor of an intent to use its right under the contract, the parties may not rescind or change the contract concluded by them without the consent of the third person.
3. The debtor under the contract has the right to raise against claims of the third person the defenses that he could raise against the creditor.
4. In the case when the third person has renounced the right provided to it by the contract, the creditor may enjoy this right if this does not contradict a statute, other legal acts, and the contract.

Article 447. Interpretation of a Contract

In the interpretation of the terms of a contract a court shall take into account the literal meaning of the words and expressions contained in it. The literal meaning of a term of a contract, in case the term is not clear, shall be established by comparison with the other terms and the sense of the contract as a whole.

If the rules contained in the first part of the present Article do not allow the determination of the content of the contract, the real common will of the parties must be ascertained, taking into account the purpose of the contract. In such a case all surrounding circumstances shall be taken into account including negotiations and correspondence preceding the contract, the practice established in the mutual relations of the parties, the customs of trade, and the subsequent conduct of the parties.

Chapter 29. Conclusion of a Contract

Article 448. Basic Provisions on the Conclusion of a Contract

Article 451. Offer

The offer must contain the essential terms of the contract.

2.The offer shall bind the person who sent it from the time of its receipt by the addressee.

If a notice on the revocation of the offer has arrived earlier than or simultaneously with the offer, the offer shall be considered not to have been submitted.

Article 452. Irrevocability of an Offer

An offer received by an addressee cannot be revoked during the time period established for its acceptance unless otherwise provided in the offer itself or follows from the nature of the proposal or the situation in which it was made.

Article 453. Invitation to Make Offers. Public Offer

1.Advertising and other proposals addressed to an indeterminate group of persons are considered as an invitation to make offers unless otherwise directly indicated in the proposal.

2.A proposal containing all essential terms of the contract from which there is perceived the will of the person who made the proposal to conclude a contract on the terms indicated in the proposal with anyone who responds shall be considered a public offer.

Article 454. Acceptance

1.An acceptance is the response of a person to whom an offer is addressed on its acceptance.

An acceptance must be full and unconditional.

2.Silence is not acceptance, unless otherwise follows from a statute, custom of trade, or from prior business relations of the parties.

3.The making by a person who has received an offer, within the time period established for its acceptance, of actions in the fulfillment of the terms of a contract indicated in it (shipment of goods, provision of services, doing work, payment of the appropriate sum, etc.) shall be considered an acceptance unless otherwise provided by a statute, other legal acts, or indicated in the offer.

Article 455. Revocation of an Acceptance

If a notice on the revocation of an acceptance has reached the person who has made the offer earlier than the acceptance or simultaneous with it, the acceptance shall be considered not to have been received.

Article 456. Conclusion of a Contract on the Basis of an Offer Defining a Time Period for Acceptance

When a time period for acceptance is defined in an offer, the contract is considered concluded if the acceptance is received by the person who has sent the offer within the time period indicated in it.

Article 457. Conclusion of a Contract on the Basis of an Offer Not Defining a Time Period for Acceptance

1.When a time period for acceptance is not defined in a written offer, the contract is considered concluded if the acceptance is received by the person who has sent the offer before the end of the time period established by a statute or other legal acts, or if such a time period has not been established—in the course of time necessary for this.

2. When an offer has been made orally without an indication of the time period for acceptance, the contract is considered concluded if the other party has immediately declared its acceptance.

Article 458. An Acceptance Received Late

In cases when a timely dispatched notification of acceptance has been received late, the acceptance shall not be considered late unless the party who has sent the offer has immediately informed the other party of the late receipt of the acceptance. If the party who has sent the offer immediately notifies the other party of the receipt of its acceptance received late, the contract is considered concluded.

Article 459. Acceptance on Other Terms

A reply of consent to conclude a contract on terms proposed in the offer is not an acceptance. Such a reply is recognized as refusal to accept and at the same time a new offer.

Article 460. Place of Conclusion of the Contract

If the place of conclusion of a contract is not indicated in it the contract shall be recognized as concluded in the place of residence of the citizen or the place of location of the legal person who sent the offer.

Article 461. Avoidance by a Party of Concluding a Contract

If a party for whom in accordance with the a statute the conclusion of a contract is obligatory has avoided concluding it, the other party shall have the right to go to a court with a demand for compulsion to conclude a contract.

A party unjustifiably avoiding concluding a contract must compensate the other party for the losses caused by this.

Article 462. Precontract Disputes

In cases of bringing of disagreements that have arisen in the conclusion of a contract for consideration by a court on the basis of Article 461 of the present Code or by agreement of the parties, the terms of the contract on which there were disagreements among the parties shall be defined in accordance with a decision of the court.

Article 463. Conclusion of a Contract at an Auction

1. A contract, unless otherwise follows from its nature, may be concluded by the conduct of an auction. The contract is concluded with the person who has won the auction.

2. The organizer of the auction may be the owner of property or the possessor of a property right or a specialized organization. A specialized organization shall act on the basis of a contract with the owner of the property or the possessor of a property right and shall act in their name or in its own name.

3. In the cases indicated in the present Code or other statute contracts on the sale of property or of a property right may be concluded only by the holding an auction.

4. An auction shall be held in the form of an auction by bidding or a competition.

The winner of an auction conducted as an auction by bidding is the person who has proposed the highest price and in a competition, the person who, by conclusion of a competition commission appointed in advance by the organizer of the auction, has proposed the best terms.

The form of an auction shall be determined by the owner of the property sold or the holder of the property right being vended, unless otherwise provided by a statute.

Article 464. Organization of and Procedure for Conduct of Auctions

1. Auctions by bidding and competitions may be open or closed.

Any person may participate in an open auction by bidding or in an open competition. Only persons invited for this purpose may participate in a closed auction by bidding or a closed competition.

2. Unless otherwise provided by a statute, a notice on the conduct of an auction shall be made by the organizer not less than thirty days before conducting it. The notice must contain information on the time, place and form of the auction, its subject, and procedure for conducting it, including for formalization of participation in the auction, determination of the person who has won the auction and also information on the starting price.

In the case the subject of the auction is the right to conclude a contract, in the notification on the planned auction the time period provided for this must be indicated.

3. Unless otherwise provided in a statute or in the notice on the conduct of the auction the organizer of an open auction who has made a notification has the right to cancel the conduct of the auction by bidding at any time but not later than three days before occurrence of the day on which it is to be held, and for a competition not later than thirty days before the holding of the competition.

In cases when the organizer of an open auction cancels the holding of the auction in violation of the above time periods, it shall be obligated to compensate the participants for the actual damage borne by them.

The organizer of a closed auction by bidding or of a closed competition has the duty to compensate the participants invited by it for their actual harm regardless of how long after the sending of the notice the cancellation of the auction occurred.

4. The participants in an auction shall pay earnest money in the amount, within the time periods, and by the procedure that are indicated in the notice on the conduct of the auction. If the auction did not take place, the earnest money shall be subject to return. Earnest money shall also be returned to persons who participated in the auction but did not win it.

Upon conclusion of a contract with a person who has won an auction, the sum of earnest money contributed by it shall be counted toward performance of obligations for the contract concluded.

5. A person who has won an auction and the organizer of the auction shall sign, on the day of the conduct of the auction by bidding or of the competition, a memorandum of the results of the auction, which shall have the force of a contract. The person who has won an auction, in case of avoiding signing the memorandum, shall lose the earnest money contributed by it. An organizer of an auction who avoided signing the memorandum shall be obligated to return the earnest money in double amount and also to compensate the person who has won the auction for the losses caused by participation in the auction.

If the subject of an auction was only the right to conclusion of a contract, such a contract must be signed by the parties not later than twenty days, or other time period indicated in the notice, after the completion of the auction and the formalization of the memorandum.

In case of avoidance by one of them of concluding the contract, the other party has the right to go to a court with a demand for compulsion to conclude the contract and also for compensation for the losses caused by avoidance of concluding it.

Article 465. Consequences of Violation of the Rules for the Conduct of Auctions

1. An auction conducted in violation of the rules established by a statute may be declared invalid by a court upon suit by an interested person.

2. Declaration of an auction as invalid shall entail the invalidity of the contract concluded with the person who has won the auction.

Chapter 30. Change and Rescission of a Contract

Article 466. Bases for Change and Rescission of a Contract

1. Change and rescission of a contract are possible by agreement of the parties, unless otherwise provided by a statute or contract.

2. Upon demand of one of the parties a contract may be changed or rescinded by decision of a court only in case of a substantial breach of the contract by the other party or in other cases provided by a statute or contract.

A breach of a contract by one party shall be recognized as substantial if it entails for another party such damage that it to a significant degree is deprived of that which it had the right to expect at the conclusion of the contract.

3. In case of unilateral refusal to perform a contract in whole or in part, when such a refusal is allowed by a statute or agreement of the parties, the contract shall be considered respectively rescinded or changed.

Article 467. Change and Rescission of a Contract in Connection With a Substantial Change of Circumstances

1. A substantial change of circumstances from which the parties proceeded in the conclusion of the contract is a basis for its change or rescission unless otherwise provided by the contract or follows from its nature.

A change of circumstances shall be recognized as substantial when they have changed to the extent that, if the parties could have reasonably foreseen this, the contract would have been concluded on significantly different terms or would not have been concluded by them at all.

2. If the parties have not attained agreement on bringing a contract in accordance with substantially changed circumstances or on its rescission, the contract may be rescinded or, upon the bases provided by Paragraph 4 of the present Article, changed by a court on demand of an interested party if the following conditions are present simultaneously:

1) at the time of the conclusion of the contract the parties proceeded on the basis that such a change of circumstances would not occur;

2) the change of circumstances was brought about by causes that the interested party could not overcome after they arose with the degree of care and caution that was demanded of it by the nature of the contract and the conditions of trade;

3) performance of a contract without change of its terms would so disturb the correlation of the contract-related property interests of the parties and would entail such harm for the interested party that it to a significant degree would be deprived of that which it had the right to expect upon conclusion of the contract;

4) it does not follow from the customs of trade or the nature of the contract that the risk of change of circumstances is borne by the interested party.

3. In case of rescission of a contract as the result of substantially changed circumstances, a court, on demand of one of the parties, shall determine the consequences of rescission of the contract proceeding from the necessity of just distribution among the parties of the expenses borne by them in connection with the performance of this contract.

4. A change in the contract in connection with a substantial change in circumstances shall be allowed by decision of a court in exceptional cases when the rescission of the contract would contradict societal interests or cause damage to the parties significantly exceeding the expenditures necessary for performance of the contract on the terms as changed by the court.

Article 468. Procedure for Changing and Rescinding a Contract

1. An agreement to change or rescind a contract shall be made in the same form as the contract unless it follows otherwise from a statute, other legal acts, contract, or customs of trade.
2. A demand for change or rescission of a contract may be made by a party to the court only after receipt of a refusal of the other party to a proposal to change or rescind the contract or the failure to receive an answer within the time period indicated in the proposal or, in its absence, in a thirty-day time period.

Article 469. Consequences of Change and Rescission of a Contract

1. Upon a change of a contract, the obligations of the parties shall be maintained in the changed form.
2. Upon rescission of a contract, the obligations of the parties shall be terminated.
3. In case of change or rescission of a contract, the obligations shall be considered changed or terminated from the time of conclusion of an agreement of the parties to change or rescind the contract, unless otherwise follows from the agreement or the nature of the change of the contract, and upon change or rescission of the contract by judicial procedure—from the time of entry into legal force of a decision of the court on changing or rescinding the contract.
4. The parties do not have the right to demand the return of what was performed by them under an obligation before the time of change or rescission of a contract, unless otherwise provided by a statute or agreement of the parties.

3. The terms of a contract of purchase and sale on the goods shall be considered agreed if the contract makes possible the determination of the name and quantity of the goods.

Article 472. Duties of the Seller to Transfer the Goods

1. The seller has the duty to transfer to the buyer the goods provided by the contract of purchase and sale.
2. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale, the seller shall have the duty, simultaneously with the transfer of the property to transfer to the buyer its accessories and also the documents relating to it (plan documentation, certificate of quality, instruction for use, etc.), provided by a statute, other legal acts, or contract.

Article 473. Period of Time for Performance of the Duty to Transfer the Goods

1. The period of time for performance by the seller of the duty to transfer the goods to the buyer shall be determined by the contract of purchase and sale and, if the contract does not make possible the determination of

2. A contract of purchase and sale shall be recognized as concluded with the condition of its performance at a strictly defined time if from the contract it clearly follows that in case of breach of the period of time for performance the buyer will lose interest in the contract.

The seller shall have the right to perform such a contract before the occurrence or after the expiration of the period of time defined in it only with the consent of the buyer.

Article 474. The Period of Time for Performance of the Duty of the Seller to Transfer the Goods

1. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale, the duty of the seller to transfer the goods to the buyer shall be considered performed at the time:

1) of handing over the goods to the buyer or to a person designated by it if the contract provides for a duty of the seller to deliver the goods;

2) of the placing of the goods at the disposition of the buyer if the goods are to be transferred to the buyer or to a person designated by it at the place where the goods are located. Goods shall be considered placed at the disposition of the buyer if in the period of time provided by the contract the goods are ready for transfer at an appropriate place and the buyer in accordance with the terms of the contract has information about the readiness of the goods for transfer. Goods are not considered ready for transfer if they are not identified for the purposes of the given contract by marking or in another manner.

2. In cases when the duty of the seller for the delivery of the goods or the transfer of the goods to the buyer at the place of their location does not follow from the contract of purchase and sale, the duty of the seller to transfer the goods to the buyer shall be considered performed from the time of giving the goods to a carrier or courier organization for transfer to the buyer, if the contract does not provide otherwise.

Article 476. Duty of the Seller to Transfer the Goods Free from the Rights of Third Persons

1. The seller has the duty to transfer the goods to the buyer free from rights of third persons, with the exception of the case when the buyer agreed to accept the goods burdened by the rights of third persons.

Nonperformance by the seller of this duty shall give the buyer the right to demand reduction of the price of the goods or rescission of the contract of purchase and sale, unless it is proved that the buyer knew or should have known of the rights of third persons to these goods.

2. The rules provided by Paragraph 1 of the present Article shall be applied likewise in the case when there were claims of third persons with respect to the goods at the time of their transfer to the buyer about which the seller knew, if these claims subsequently have been found by the established procedure to be lawful.

1. In case of taking of the goods from the buyer by third persons on bases that arose before the performance of the contract of purchase and sale, the seller shall be obligated to compensate the buyer for the losses suffered by it, unless it proves that the buyer knew or should have known of the presence of these bases.

2. Failure by the buyer to bring the seller into participation in the case shall free the seller from liability to the buyer if the seller proves that if it had taken part in the case it could have prevented the taking of the goods sold from the buyer.

If the seller does not transfer or refuses to transfer to the buyer accessories and documents relating to the goods that it must transfer in accordance with a statute, other legal acts, or the contract of purchase and sale, the buyer shall have the right to designate to it a reasonable period of time for their transfer.

In the case when the accessories or documents relating to the goods are not transferred by the seller in the designated period of time, the buyer shall have the right to refuse the goods unless otherwise provided by the contract.

Article 481. The Quantity of the Goods

1. The quantity of the goods subject to transfer to the buyer shall be provided by the contract of purchase and sale in appropriate units of measurement or as a monetary expression. The term on the quantity of the goods can be agreed by means of establishing in the contract a procedure for determining it.

2. If the contract of purchase and sale does not make possible the determination of the quantity of the goods subject to transfer, the contract shall not be considered to have been concluded.

Article 482. Consequences of Breach of the Term of the Contract on the Quantity of the Goods

1. If the seller has transferred to the buyer, in breach of the contract of purchase and sale, a smaller quantity of the goods than defined by the contract, the buyer shall have the right, unless otherwise provided by the contract, either to demand the transfer of the lacking quantity of the goods or to refuse the goods transferred and to refuse to pay for them, or—if the goods have been paid for—to demand the return of the monetary sum paid.

2. If the seller has transferred the goods to the buyer in a quantity exceeding that indicated in the contract of purchase and sale, the buyer has the duty to inform the seller about this by the procedure provided by Paragraph 1 of Article 499 of the present Code. In the case when, within a reasonable period time after the receipt of notice from the buyer, the seller does not dispose of the excess part of the goods, the buyer shall have the right, unless otherwise provided by the contract, to accept all the goods.

3. In case of acceptance by a buyer of the goods in a quantity exceeding that indicated in the contract of purchase and sale (Paragraph 2 of the present Article), the additionally accepted goods must be paid for in accordance with the price defined for the goods accepted under the contract, unless another price is defined by agreement of the parties.

2. If the assortment is not defined in the contract of purchase and sale and no procedure is established in the contract for defining, but from the nature of the obligation it follows that the goods must be transferred to the buyer in an assortment, the seller shall have the right to transfer to the buyer goods in an assortment based on the needs of the buyer that were known to the seller at the time of concluding the contract or to refuse to perform the contract.

Article 484. Consequences of Breach of the Term of the Contract on Assortment

1. In case of transfer by the seller of the goods provided by the contract of purchase and sale in an assortment not corresponding to the contract, the buyer shall have the right to refuse to accept and pay for them or, if they have been paid for, to demand the return of the monetary sum that has been paid.

2. If the seller has transferred to the buyer, along with goods whose assortment corresponds to the contract of purchase and sale, goods in breach of the term on assortment, the buyer shall have the right at its choice:

- 1) to accept the goods corresponding to the term on assortment and to refuse the remaining goods;
- 2) to refuse all the goods transferred;
- 3) to demand the replacement of the goods not corresponding to the term on assortment with the goods in the assortment provided by the contract;
- 4) to accept all the goods transferred.

3. Upon rejection of the goods whose assortment does not correspond to the term of the contract of purchase and sale or upon making a demand for replacement of the goods not corresponding to the term of the contract on assortment, the buyer shall have the right also to refuse payment for these goods and, if they have been paid for, to demand the return of the monetary sum that has been paid.

4. Goods not corresponding to the term of the contract of purchase and sale on assortment shall be considered accepted unless the buyer, within a reasonable period of time after receiving them, notifies the seller of its rejection of the goods.

5. If the buyer does not reject the goods whose assortment does not correspond to the contract of purchase and sale, it has the duty to pay for them at the price agreed with the seller. In the case when the seller has not taken the necessary measures for agreeing on a price within a reasonable period of time, the buyer shall pay for the goods at the price that at the time of concluding the contract usually was taken for analogous goods in comparable circumstances.

6. The rules of the present Article shall be applied unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale.

By agreement between the seller and the buyer goods may be transferred that correspond to higher quality requirements than the obligatory requirements established by the procedure provided by a statute.

Article 486. Guaranty of Quality of the Goods

1. Goods that the seller has the duty to transfer to the buyer must correspond to the requirements provided by Article 485 of the present Code at the time of their transfer to the buyer, unless another time of determining the correspondence of the goods to these requirements is provided by contract of purchase and sale, and during the limits of a reasonable period of time they must be suitable for the purpose for which goods of such a type are usually used.

2. In the case when the contract of purchase and sale provides for making by the seller of a guaranty of the quality of the goods, the seller has the duty to transfer to the buyer goods that must correspond to the requirements provided by Article 485 of the present Code for the course of a determined period of time established by the contract (guaranty time period).

3. A guaranty of quality of goods extends also to all its component parts (or constituent manufactures) unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale.

3. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale, the guaranty time period for a constituent manufacture is considered equal to the guaranty time period for the basic manufacture and starts to run simultaneously with the guaranty time period for the basic manufacture.

4. For goods (or a constituent manufacture) transferred by the seller in place of the goods (or a constituent manufacture) in which defects were discovered during the guaranty time period (Article 492), a guaranty time period of the same length is established as for those for which they were exchanged, unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale.

Article 488. Suitability Time Period of the Goods

1. A statute, other legal acts, obligatory requirements of State Standards, or other obligatory requirements may define the time period at the expiration of which the goods are considered unsuitable for use for their regular purpose (suitability time period).

2. Goods for which a suitability time period is established must be transferred by the seller to the buyer in a manner so calculated that they can be used for their regular use before the expiration of the suitability time period.

- 3.If a statute, other legal acts, obligatory requirements of State Standards, or the contract of purchase and sale provide for the duty of the seller to check the quality of the goods transferred to the buyer (testing, analysis, inspection, etc.), the seller must provide the buyer with proof of the conduct of checking the quality of the goods.
- 4.The procedure and also other terms of checking the quality of the goods done both by the buyer and by the seller must be one and the same.

Article 491. Consequences of Transfer of the Goods of Improper Quality

 - 2)uncompensated elimination of the defects of the goods within a reasonable period of time;
 - 3)compensation for its expenses for elimination of the defects of the goods.
- 2.In case of substantial breach of the requirements for quality of the goods (discovery of defects that cannot be eliminated, defects that cannot be eliminated without incommensurate expenses or expenditures of time, or defects that appear repeatedly or that appear again after their elimination, and other such defects), the buyer shall have the right at its choice:
 - 1)to refuse to perform the contract of purchase and sale and to demand return of the monetary sum paid for the goods;

Article 493. Periods of Time for Discovery of Defects in Transferred Goods

- 1.Unless otherwise established by a statute or the contract of purchase and sale, the buyer shall have the right to present claims connected with defects in the goods on the condition that they are discovered within the periods of time established by the present Article.

The period of time for discovery of defects in the goods subject to transportation or mailing shall be calculated from the day of delivery of the goods to the place of their destination.
- 3.If a guaranty time period is established for the goods, the buyer shall have the right to present claims connected with defects in the goods upon discovery of the defects during the course of the guaranty time period.
- 4.In the case when a guaranty time period for a constituent manufacture is established in the contract of purchase and sale that is shorter than for the basic manufacture, the buyer shall have the right to present claims for defects in the constituent manufacture in case of their discovery during the course of the guaranty time period for the basic manufacture.
- 5.If a guaranty time period for a constituent manufacture is established in the contract that is longer than a guaranty time period for the basic manufacture, the buyer shall have the right to present claims for defects in the goods if the defects in the constituent manufacture are discovered in the course of the guaranty time period for it, regardless of the expiration of the guaranty time period for the basic manufacture.

Article 495. Complete Unit of Goods

 - 2.When the price is established depending upon the weight of the goods, it shall be determined according to the net weight unless otherwise provided by the contract of purchase and sale.
 - 3.If the contract of purchase and sale provides that the price of the goods is subject to change depending upon factors conditioning the price of the goods (cost of production, expenditures, etc.), but does not define a method for reconsidering the price, the price shall be determined on the basis of the relationship of these factors at the time of concluding the contract and at the time of transfer of the goods. In case of delay by the seller in performance of the duty to transfer of the goods, the price shall be determined on the basis of the relationship of these factors at the time of concluding the contract and at the time of transfer of the goods provided by the contract, or if the time is not provided by the contract—at the time determined in accordance with Article 352 of the present Code.

Chapter 43. Storage

§ 1. General Provisions on Storage

Article 813. The Contract of Storage

1. Under the contract of storage, one party (the bailee) undertakes the duty to store property transferred to it by the other party (the bailor), and to return this property in safely kept condition.
2. In a contract of storage in which the bailee is a commercial organization or a noncommercial organization conducting storage as one of the purposes of its professional activity (a professional bailee), there may be provided an obligation of the bailee to accept for storage property from the bailor within a time period provided by the contract.

Article 814. Form of the Contract of Storage

1. The contract of storage must be concluded in written form.
2. The simple written form of a contract of storage shall be considered observed if the acceptance of property for storage is evidenced by the bailee by the issuance to the bailor:
 - 1) of a storage receipt, receipt, certificate, or other document signed by the bailor;
 - 2) of a numbered token (or check) or other symbol evidencing the receipt of property for storage if such a form of confirmation of the receipt of property for storage is provided by a statute or other legal act or is usual for such a type of storage.

Article 815. Performance of the Duty to Accept Property for Storage

1. A bailee who has undertaken by the contract of storage the duty to take property for storage (Paragraph 2 of Article 813) does not have the right to demand the transfer of this property for storage. However, a bailor who has not transferred property for storage within the time period provided by the contract shall bear liability to the bailee for the losses caused in connection with the failure of the storage to occur unless otherwise provided by a statute or the contract of storage. The bailor shall be freed of this liability if it notifies the bailee of its refusal of the bailee's services in a reasonable period of time.
2. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of storage, the bailee shall be freed from the duty to accept property for storage in the case when property is not given to it within the time period provided by the contract.

Article 816. Time Period of Storage

1. The bailee undertakes the duty to store property during the time period provided by the contract of storage.
2. If the time period of storage is not provided by the contract and cannot be determined on the basis of its provisions, the bailee has the duty to store the property until the demand for it by the bailor.
3. If the time period of storage is determined by the time of demand for property by the bailor, the bailee shall have the right on the expiration of the time period of storage of property usual in such circumstances to demand of the bailor that it takes back the property, providing it with a reasonable period of time for this. Failure of the bailor to perform this obligation shall entail the consequences provided by Article 826 of the present Code.

Article 817. Storage of Property with Loss of Identity

In cases directly provided by the contract of storage, property accepted for storage from one bailor may be mixed with property of the same kind and quality of other bailors (storage with loss of identity). An equal quantity or a quantity agreed upon by the parties of property of the same type and quality shall be returned to the bailor.

Article 818. Duty of the Bailee to Ensure the Safekeeping of the Property

1. The bailee has the duty to take all measures provided by the contract of storage to ensure the safekeeping of property transferred for storage.
In case of absence in the contract of terms on such measures or incompleteness of these terms, the bailee also must take for the preservation of property the measures corresponding to the customs of trade and the nature of the obligation including the qualities of property transferred for storage, unless the necessity of taking these measures is excluded by the contract.
2. The bailee in any case must take for preserving property transferred to it the measures whose obligatory nature is provided by a statute, by other legal acts, or by the procedure established by them (fire safety, sanitation, security, etc.).
3. If storage is conducted without compensation, the bailee has the duty to care for the property accepted for storage not less than for its own property.

Article 819. Use of Property Transferred for Storage

The bailee shall not have the right without the consent of the bailor to use property transferred for storage nor to provide the possibility for its use to third persons with the exception of the case when the use of the stored property is necessary for ensuring its safekeeping and does not contradict the contract of storage.

Article 820. Changing the Conditions of Storage

1. In case of necessity of changing the conditions of storage of property provided by the contract of storage, the bailee shall be obligated to notify the bailor of this without delay and to await its answer.

If a change of the conditions of storage is necessary for elimination of the danger of loss of, shortage of, or harm to the property, the bailee shall have the right to change the method, place, and other conditions of storage without awaiting the answer of the bailor.

2. If during the time of storage a real danger of spoilage of property has arisen or property has already been subject to spoilage, or circumstances have arisen not allowing the making provision for its safekeeping and the timely taking of measures by the bailor cannot be expected, the bailee shall have the right to independently sell property or part of it at the price prevailing at the place of storage. If these circumstances arose due to causes for which the bailee is not liable, it shall have the right to compensation for its expenses for sale at the expense of the purchase price.

Article 821. Storage of Property with Dangerous Qualities

1. Property that is easily inflammable, present danger of explosion, or in general is dangerous by its nature, if the bailor, in its submission for storage, did not warn the bailee of these qualities, may at any time be rendered harmless or destroyed by the bailee without compensation of losses to the bailor. The bailor shall be liable for the losses caused in connection with the storage of such property to the bailee and to third persons.

In case of transfer of property with dangerous qualities for storage to a professional bailee, the rules provided by the first subparagraph of the present Paragraph, shall be applied in the case when such property was submitted for storage under an incorrect designation and the bailee at their acceptance could not by an external inspection establish its dangerous qualities.

In case of compensated storage in the cases provided by the present Paragraph the remuneration paid for storage of property shall not be returned and, if it was not paid, the bailee may recover it in full.

2. If property indicated in the first subparagraph of Paragraph 1 of the present Article that was taken for storage with the knowledge and consent of the bailee has become, despite the observance of the conditions of its storage, dangerous for those around or for the property of the bailee or third persons and the circumstances do not allow the bailee to demand from the bailor their prompt removal or it fails to fulfill such demand, this property may be rendered harmless or destroyed by the bailee without compensation for losses to the bailor. In such a case, the bailor shall not bear liability to the bailee and third persons for the losses caused in connection with the storage of this property.

Article 822. Transfer of Property for Storage to a Third Person

Unless the contract of storage provides otherwise, the bailee does not have the right without the consent of the bailor to transfer property for storage to a third person, with the exception of cases when it is compelled to this by force of circumstances in the interests of the bailor and is deprived of the possibility of acquiring its consent. The bailee shall be obligated to notify the bailor without delay of the transfer of property for storage to a third person.

Upon the transfer of property for storage to a third person, the terms of the contract between the bailor and the original bailee shall remain in force and the latter shall be liable for the actions of the third person to whom it transferred property for storage as for its own.

Article 823. Remuneration for Storage

1. Remuneration for storage must be paid to the bailee at the end of the storage and, if payment for storage is provided by periods, it must be paid in respective parts at the expiration of each period.

2. In case of delay of payment of remuneration for storage for more than half of the time period for which it should have been paid, the bailee shall have the right to refuse to perform the contract and to demand from the bailor the immediate removal of property submitted for storage.

3. If storage is terminated before the expiration of the agreed time period due to circumstances for which the bailee is not liable, it shall have the right to a proportional part of the remuneration, and in the case provided by Paragraph 1 of Article 821 of the present Code, to the whole sum of remuneration.

If storage is terminated early due to circumstances for which the bailee is liable, it shall not have the right to demand remuneration for storage and must return the sums received toward this remuneration to the bailor.

4. If, at the expiration of the time period of storage, property that is in storage is not taken back by the bailor, the bailor shall be obligated to pay the bailee proportional remuneration for further storage of the property. This rule shall be applied also in the case when the bailor has the duty to take back property before the expiration of the time period for storage.

5. The rules of the present Article shall be applied unless the contract of storage provides otherwise.

Article 824. Compensation of Expenses for Storage

1. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of storage, the expenses of the bailee for storage of property are included in the remuneration for storage.

2. In case of storage without compensation, the bailor shall be obligated to reimburse the bailee for necessary expenses made by it for storage of property unless a statute or the contract of storage provides otherwise.

Article 825. Extraordinary Expenses for Storage

1. Expenses for storage of property that exceed the usual expenses of such type and that the parties could not foresee at the concluding of the contract of storage (extraordinary expenses) shall be reimbursed to the bailee if the bailor gave consent to these expenses or approved them later and also in other cases provided by a statute, other legal acts, or the contract.

2. In case of necessity to make extraordinary expenses, the bailee shall be obligated to ask the bailor for consent for these expenses. If the bailor does not communicate its non-consent in the time period indicated by the bailee or in the course of time reasonably necessary for an answer, it shall be considered that it consents to the extraordinary expenses.

In the case when the bailee has made extraordinary expenses for storage without having received preliminary consent for these expenses from the bailor, although by the circumstances of the case this was possible and the bailor has not later approved them, the bailee may demand compensation for extraordinary expenses only within the limits of the damage that might have been caused to the property if these expenses had not been made.

3. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of storage, extraordinary expenses shall be compensated in addition to the remuneration for storage.

Article 826. The Duty of the Bailor to Take Back the Property

1. Upon expiration of the agreed time period of storage or of the time period given by the bailee for the taking back of property on the basis of Paragraph 3 of Article 816 of the present Code, the bailor shall be obligated immediately to take back property transferred for storage.

2. Upon nonperformance by the bailor of its duty to take back property transferred for storage, including in case of its avoidance of receiving the property, the bailee shall have the right, unless otherwise provided by the contract of storage, after written warning to the bailor, independently to sell property at the price prevailing in the place of storage and if the value of property by appraisal exceeds one hundred times the monthly minimum wage, to sell it at an auction by the procedure provided by the statute on public auctions.

The sum acquired from the sale of property shall be transferred to the bailor less the sum due to the bailee, including its expenses for the sale of the property.

Article 827. Obligation of the Bailee to Return the Property

1. The bailee shall be obligated to return, to the bailor or the person indicated by it as the recipient, the same property that was transferred for storage, unless the contract provides for storage with loss of identity (Article 817).

2. Property must be returned by the bailee in the same condition in which it was received for storage, taking into account its natural worsening, natural decrease, or other change as the result of its natural qualities.

3. Simultaneously with the return of the property, the bailee shall be obligated to transfer the fruits and income received during its storage unless otherwise provided by the contract of storage.

Article 828. Bases of Liability of the Bailee

1. The bailee shall be liable for loss of, shortage of, or harm to property accepted for storage on the bases provided by Article 417 of the present Code.

A professional bailee shall be liable for loss of, shortage of, or harm to property unless it proves that the loss, shortage, or harm occurred as the result of force majeure or from qualities of property about which the bailee, accepting it for storage, did not know and should not have known, or as the result of the intent or gross negligence of the bailor.

2. For loss of, shortage of, or harm to property accepted for storage after the occurrence of the duty of the bailor to take this property back (Paragraph 1 of Article 826), the bailee shall be liable only in presence of intent or gross negligence on its part.

Article 829. Extent of Liability of the Bailee

1. Losses caused to the bailor by the loss of, shortage of, or harm to property shall be compensated by the bailee in accordance with Article 409 of the present Code, unless a statute or the contract of storage provide otherwise.

2. In case of uncompensated storage, losses caused to the bailor by the loss of, shortage of, or harm to property shall be compensated:

1) for loss and shortage of property—in the amount of the value of the lost or short property;

2) for harm to property—in the amount by which its value was reduced.

3. In the case when, as the result of harm for which the bailee is liable, the quality of property has changed to such an extent that it cannot be utilized for its primary use, the bailor shall have the right to refuse it and to demand from the bailee compensation for the value of property and also for other losses, unless otherwise provided by a statute or the contract of storage.

Article 830. Compensation for Losses Caused to the Bailee

The bailor shall be obligated to compensate the bailee for the losses caused by the qualities of property submitted for storage if the bailee, when accepting property for storage, did not know and should not have known of these qualities.

Article 831. Termination of Storage on Demand of the Bailor

The bailee shall be obligated on the first demand of the bailor to return property accepted for storage, even if the time period of its storage provided by the contract still has not ended.
In this case the bailor shall be obligated to compensate the bailee for losses caused by the early termination of the obligation unless otherwise provided by the contract.

Article 832. Application of General Provisions on Storage to Individual Types of Storage

3.If the exaggeration of the insured sum in the contract of insurance was the result of deception on the part of the insured, the insurer shall have the right to demand declaration of the contract as invalid and compensation for the losses caused to it by this in the amount exceeding the sum received by it from the insured as an insurance premium.

4.The rules provided by Paragraphs 1-3 of the present Article respectively also shall be applied in the case when the insured sum had exceeded the insurance value as the result of insurance of one and the same object with two or several insurers (duplicate insurance).

In cases provided by a statute the amount of the insurance premium shall be defined in accordance with the insurance tariffs established or regulated by the agencies of state insurance supervision.

3.If a contract of insurance provides for the paying of an insurance premium in installments, the contract may define the consequences of nonpayment of current installment payments within the established time periods.

Article 1015. Consequences of Increase of the Insured Risk During the Time Period of Effectiveness of the Contract of Insurance

1. During the time period of effectiveness of the contract of property insurance, the insured (or the benefit-aquirer) shall be obligated to inform the insurer immediately of the substantial changes that became known to it of the circumstances communicated to the insurer upon concluding the contract if these changes may substantially influence the increase of the insured risk.

In any event, circumstances specifically stated by the insurer in the standard form of contract of insurance (or insurance policy), or in the rules of insurance given to the insured.

2. An insurer that has been notified of the circumstances entailing increase of the insured risk shall have the right to demand changes of the terms of the contract of insurance or payment of an increased insurance premium proportional to the increased risk.

The same duty rests on the benefit-aquirer who learned of the concluding of the contract of insurance to its benefit if it intends to use the right to insurance compensation.

2. Nonperformance of the duty provided by Paragraph 1 of the present Article shall give the insurer the right to refuse to pay the insurance compensation, unless it is proved that the insurer learned in a timely manner of the happening of the insured event or that the insurer's lack of information on this could not affect its duty to pay the insurance compensation.

3. The rules provided by Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the present Article shall be applied respectively to the contract of personal insurance if the insured event is the death of the insured person or the causing of harm to his health. In such a case the time period for notification of the insurer established by the contract cannot be less than thirty days.

In taking such measures, the insured must follow the instructions of the insurer if they are communicated to the insured.

2. Expenses for the purpose of reducing the losses subject to compensation by the insurer, if such expenses were necessary or were made to fulfill the instructions of the insurer, must be compensated by the insurer, even if the respective measures turned out to be unsuccessful.

Such expenses shall be compensated proportionally to the relation of the insured sum to the insurance value, regardless of whether, together with compensation of other losses, they may exceed the insured sum.

3. The insurer shall be freed from compensation for losses that have arisen as the result of the fact that the insured intentionally did not take the reasonable and available measures to reduce the possible losses.

Unless the contract of property insurance provides otherwise, the right to claim that the insured (or benefit-aquirer) has against the person liable for the losses compensated as the result of the insurance passes, within the limits of the sum paid, to the insurer who has paid insurance compensation. A term of the contract excluding the transfer to the insurer of the right of a claim against a person who has intentionally caused losses is void.

2. The right of claim that has passed to the insurer shall be exercised by it with observance of the rules regulating the relations between the insured (or benefit-aquirer) and the person liable for the losses.

3. The insured (or the benefit-aquirer) shall be obligated to transfer to the insurer all the documents and proofs and to communicate to it all information necessary for the exercise by the insurer of the right of a claim that have passed to it.

4. If the insured (or the benefit-aquirer) renounced its right of claim against the person liable for the losses compensated by the insurer or the exercise of this right became impossible due to the fault of the insured (or the benefit-aquirer), the insurer shall be freed from payment of the insurance compensation in full or in corresponding part and shall have the right to demand the return of the sum of compensation paid in excess.

2. Unless otherwise provided by the contract of reinsurance, the rules of the present Chapter applicable with respect to insurance of entrepreneurial risk shall be applied to the contract of reinsurance. In this case, the insurer under the contract of insurance (the basic contract) who has concluded a contract of reinsurance shall be considered in this latter contract to be the insured.
